THE EVENING CRITIC. ESTABLISHED AUGUST, 1869.

AMUSEMENTS.

"Patience" at Ford's last evening was produced in much finer style than on any previous occasion in this city, and to a large and brilliant audience. The entire company seemed to harmonize better than when here last, and the disagreeable features of the performance had been removed. Last night it made a decided hit. It is not, however, and cannot ever be as popular as Audran's "Mascotte," or as any of the other operas of Gilbert and Sullivan. Messes, Rennie and Fitzgerald were excellent in their characters, and Misses McHenry, Lucette and Stembler very tlever, esperially the former, whose Lady Jane is the most interesting feature of the piece.

This evening "Patience" will be repeated, and at to-morrow's matine we will again have the charming "Mascotte."

Maggzine will contain an exhaustive article by Dr. Bliss, chief physiciain in charge, contenting the particle he thus describes the last scene: After making some arrangements for the President's comfort, and after the arrival of Gen. Swaim, who was the nurse for the first part of the night, Mrs. Garfield left the President quietly sleeping. I then returned to my room to prepare the directions for the night, where I was visited by Col. Rockwell, who earnestly discussed with methe probability of a favorable night. The Colonel was to relieve Gen. Swaim at 2:30 a.m. I myself did not intend to sleep until after 12 o'clock, as I had some special observations to make at that heur, should the President be awake and his condition favorable. Col. Rockwell left the room to seek his much needed rest. At 10:30 I was The Opera-house.

Carroll Institute Reception.

The usual monthly reception of the Carroll Institute took place last night at their rooms, on G street, between Ninth and Tenth. A large audience was present, who listened with pleasure to the following programme, which was excellently rendered: Address by the president, Mr. Fallon; yocal duet, Miss Lulie Boone and Miss Katie Burrows; song, "The Heart Bowed Down," Mr. John Trainor; essay, "The Church and Education," Mr. D. J. Murphy; song, "Farewell" and "Warrior Bold," Mr. Charles Ward; piano solo, Miss Addie Prosperi; recitation, Mr. J. J. Finnegan; song, "In the Gloaming," Miss Katie Burrows; reading, Mr. W. A. The Wrong Ticket.

A young man, having upon his arm the girl upon whom his soul dotes, walked up to the box office of the National Theatre the other night and with the monchalance of a bookmaker pulled from his vest a slip of paper, which he supposed was a free ticket to the show. He handed the little piece of paper to Mr. Kinsley, who, after glancing at it a second, said: "Young man, put your car closer to the box. Why, that is a pawn ticket." "Good heavens," said the astounded youth, "I had a pass for two," and running his hand into his other vest pocket drew out the lost document, and presenting it passed in. The young man now swears that he will never accept another free ticket to the show, nor will he ever leave his celluloid watch with his "uncle" again.

An Enjoyable Party.

"Oh, what is the matter?" I said: "Mrs. Garfield, the President is daying."

Leaning over her husband, and fervently his sing his brow, she exclaimed:

"Oh! why am I made to suffer this cruel wrong!"

Masn Tickwell, Mr. C. O. Rockwell, Mr. Servants and myself were witnesses of the last seene in this sorrowful history. While summoning Mrs. Garfield, Mrs. Rockwell, Mrs. Garfield, Mrs. Rockwell, Mrs. C. O. Rockwell, Mr. C. O. Rockwell, Mr. C. O. Rockwell, Mr. C. O. Rockwell, Mr. C. O. Rockwell, Mrs. Co. Rockwell,

An Enjoyable Party.

The "P. C." Club gave a private party to their friends at Shea's Hall last night, and it was a success in every particular. Dancing was the feature of the evening, and about midnight a collation was served and ample justice was done to the same. The entire affair was nicely arranged by the Misses Emma and Mollic Adams, Misses Nowman, Fox, Shellhorn and Busher, with the able assistance of Messrs. A. L. Eshelman, T. B. Walker, James H. Turner and others. While watching the merry couples watzing we noticed Miss Walker, the Misses Bell, Fox, Bailey, Walker, Rose Stoddard, Rose Mohler, the Misses Simms, Busheau, Mrs. Emma Dunn, and Messrs, John Eshelman, L. Gerhardt, Salina, Birch, Plugge, Gregory, Clements, Tegeler, Bergling, and many others.

Coast Survey Report.

Prof. Hilgard, in charge of the Coast and Geodetic Survey, has submitted the annual report of that branch of the service to the Secretary of the Treasury, in which he says there was an examination of the oyster beds of the Chesapeake and triangulation points determined for a plane table survey of the District of Columbia. There was also a topographical survey for a site of the new naval observatory. Much work of a scientific character was accomplished on the field on the Atlantic and Pacific coasts and in the interior of the United States.

Our Martyr President. [The following poem was written for THE CRITIC by a little girl in an orphan asylum

He has duy: j
He has gone from our midst, our father,
Protector, adviser and friend.
Our nation in tears is imbedded,
of sorrow and grief there is no end.
Of a life that was bonest and holy,
Full of charity, goodness and truth,
Naught is left but the momory only
Of sufferings, martyrdom and death.

Oh! gaze on that poor, aged mother,
Who nursed him in sickness and health—
In childhood and manhood her treasure;

to melt.
Then turn your sad gaze to his widow,
A lady both noble and brave,
Stricken down in the first light of morning
With grief which sho'll bear to her grave.

Now look at those five orphaned children,
Whose father our President was,
And think how their young lives are blighted.
Then reflect on the serious cause.
Our nation is mournfully weeping,
And sighing for him who is dead,
But we'll meet him again up in Heaven,
When our soul's troubled ocean's at rest.

Dr. Bliss' Account of President Garfield's Benth.

The December number of the Century
Magazine will contain an exhaustive article by Dr. Bliss, chief physician in charge, cen. cerning the case of President Garfield. In the article he thus describes the last scene;
After rasking some arrangements for The annual report of the Secretary of War is completed and ready for transmission to Congress. Some portions of it relating to suggestions for the speedy completion of the War Department building and one or two other minor matters have already been published, and up to this time those meagre publications are all that has been made public of the contents of the report.

It has since been learned that the report invites special attention to that part of the report of the chief of engineers relating to the inadequacy and weakness of our sea-coast defenses and the necessity for some-thing beyond their mere preservation and repair.

Secretary Lincoln points out briefly the great danger which results from having our great danger which results from having our fortifications in their present weak condition and shows that they are utterly unfit to withstand the assaults of modern ships of war. He says: "The chief of engineers shows that a defense by fortifications and torpedoes is the only one which is at all practicable for coasts as extensive as ours, comprising so many rich maritime cities, extensive navy-yards and depots of supply, and that any attempt at any other mode of defense would be enormously expensive both for first cost and for cost of maintenance and that it is the only mode adopted by maritime nations. adopted by maritime nations.

"Experience shows that modern wars come on suddenly; that serious international dis-putes occur between nations the relations of putes occur between nations the relations of which are apparently the most unlikely to be other than friendly, and that a condition of readiness for defense and an attitude of belligerancy are sometimes the best pre-ventives of war. We know that the neces-sary new works and the proper modification of our old works will require many years for their completion, and it seems simply a matter of common variations, that we confor their completion, and it seems simply a matter of common pridence that we com-mence without delay and under liberal ap-propriations to put our coasts in an efficient condition of defense." The report also in this connection calls attention to the wants of the torpedo service, as set forth by the chief of engineers, and indorses the recom-mendation of that officer that the engineer battalion be increased to 520 men, in order to meet the proper requirements of the service.

Secretary Lincoln indorses the recommendation of the Judge-Advocate-General for a provision of law for the addition of four captains to the corps of Judge-Advocates. He also commends the suggestion of the Quartermaster-General that the Arlington Cemetery, near this city, be constituted a national official cemetery for the interment of officers of the Government, members of Congress and others who may die in ment of officers of the Government, mem-bers of Congress and others who may die in this city or elsewhere and says:

"There is space for this purpose. The cemetery is sufficiently remote from the city to be unobjectionable on the score of health, and yet near enough to be easy of communication. Being separated from the city by a great river, it is not liable to be by the growth of population." An appropriation is asked for repairing the road from

The report also calls attention to the ne-cessity for further legislation to make avail-able the appropriation of $250,000 for the crection of a building for the Pension Office, creetion of a building for the Pension Office, the law making which appropriation was inoperative, because of the omission of the word "and" in the act. It also commends to Congress the recommendation of the Sur-geon-General for an appropriation for the erection of a new building for the Army Medical Museum and a medical library, in order to preserve the invaluable records order to preserve the invaluable records that have accumulated.
